SERIOUS ILLNESS OF "JOCK" WHITE

William J. White, of the Inter-Island Steam Navigation Co.'s office, yesterday received a cablegram stating that his father. John C. White, was seriously ill in San Francisco. The old gentleman was a well-known resident of Honolulu for many years and went to San Francisco about eight years ago. Before the revolution of 1893 Mr. White was Superintendent of Water Works, having previously held the office of Fire Marshal. In the lattermentioned capacity he conducted a vigorous crusade against the over-storage of kerosene oil by retailers. This was after the burning of Chinatown in 1886, which was greatly promoted by I will offer for sale at auction the quantities of kerosene oil in the stores. Mr. White was prominent in the volunteer fire department of those days, any of whose monthly board meetings would have seemed irregularly constituted without the presence of "Jock" White, as he was familiarly

HARRIS DEFENDS LEGISLATURE W. W. Harris, former member of the Legislature, and again a candidate, said that the Republican legislature two years ago fulfilled every pledge in its platform. In the session of 1903 the County Act was passed, although it was afterwards declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. Th. Republicans passed a labor law limiting the time of labor on government works to eight hours per day, and it passed a law whereby only citizen labor can be employed on public works. It passed the loan bill. Improvements under its expenditures have been completed and still further improvements are under

Mr. Harris spoke at length on the County Act and its failure to pass the Supreme Court. He said that every Republican legislator felt satisfied that it was a good bill and would hold under the law. To that end the appropriation bills and the loan act were shaped to become effective under the county government law.

In the face of these facts can you say that the Republican party was insincere in passing the County Act?

DELEGATE AND HIS WORK. Delegate Kuhio was introduced amid East and its effects on mission work cheers. The difficulties which a Delegate met with in introducing bills and getting something for his constituents, were great. About 15,000 bills were introduced, but Congress settled down to only the great bills, pension, etc., and his bills with hundreds of others were thrust aside for the time being. To get a hearing for a bill it had to pass before a tired committee of twenty-two men. Speech- Do Anything for a bill it had to pass before a tired making on the floor of the House availed nothing. It was work in the committees which told. Iaukea would be a nonentity. As a Democratic delegate he would fan to get the ear of the Republican majority and Hawaii would suffer. The old, old talk of the Republican party being responsible for the annexation of the islands, was something of the past, and should be put
